“ To All of Bill and Ann's family,
We extend to you all our sincere sympathy. This sudden and tragic loss of both of these amazing people you knew and loved as parents, daughters in law and grandparents is hard to process. Charlie and I knew them through Bridge both the Couples group we joined awhile ago and then one of Ann's several "Ladies" groups for me. From the time we met them they were always so gracious and fun to be with. We, ourselves, in these groups, are grieving the loss of our two very dear and special friends. When our family faced the loss of our daughter six years ago to cancer, they were there with a kind word and caring heart not just then but over the years as they knew that pain wouldn't just go away.

Bill, with his interest in environmental issues and work, amazed Charlie and I one night at their home while playing Bridge. I was his partner and had made a comment about our son Andrew, who, for making this more clear, is a professor of environmental engineering at Tufts University. I think someone had said, what does Andrew do....and I had laughed and said I'm not really sure, researches soil and toxins and how to clean it up is my simple answer. Well, Bill pops up with, yes, that's interesting work he does...I've read it....etc. I looked at him and said, You what? Yes, I've read lots of his published papers!

I said that is just amazing! He just chuckled and smiled that smile and said, and yes, he has a chemical engineering undergraduate degree from GA Tech and then the Ph.D.in environmental engineering from there too. Makes me smile remembering it. So even though Andrew's parents perhaps don't get the full scientific scope of itBill Albright did and asked about him often! Bill and I always had fun being partners. I loved his humor.

Ann was the ever attractive and fun person to be around. We always heard lots of stories filled with love and pride of the granddaughters. You have great role models for life girls! Faith, family, love and compassion for others.

There are missed! They will always be missed. The void left for us who knew them only socially is huge!

We know your loss is immense!
